Dear Olin team at EPA,

Since the 1980's, the Olin Chemical site has dominated the news and issues of our town. Decades of regular meetings advised our residents of activity at the site, of subsequent efforts shared by government agencies and citizens groups, and of it's eventual superfund status. Plumes, pools, slurry walls and their contaminants have been scrutinized. It is critical that we persist, and continue to focus on the agreed upon central concerns which have been identified, though the picture has been obscured by time and layers of bureaucracy.

We continue to expect no less than the comprehensive cleanup suggested by consultants who have advised it based on their many years of analysis. This would include, but not be limited to the removal of contaminated soils, as well as the return of the aquifer to potable drinking water- as was the initial goal many years ago. What we do not expect is that the various owners of the Olin site to be excused from their environmental, social and fiscal responsibilities.

Your efforts on all of our behalf's are, and have always been, very much appreciated.
